

David Goldhill, The Catastrophic Care Approach to Healthcare Delivery

Transcription By Isaiah Mudge

What we've been looking at in healthcare are in great part, frankly, intellectual. Which is, we have this view of healthcare that it is fundamentally different than everything else, and in some ways it's right. Healthcare is one of the small handful of services for which we have correct policy for a very, very long time. It is something with [certain] unique characteristics that their entire lives are unhealthy lives. Societies have tried to address that in a variety of ways. But one of the things that's been true is that we've tried to address that in a variety of ways. But one of the things that's been true is that we've tried to address that in a variety of ways. But one of the things that's been true is that we've tried to address that in a variety of ways.

We had a debate about how healthcare should be properly financed and governed and addressed.

knowledge that the seller had, meant relying on normal consumer markets in healthcare was impossible.

you also see an extraordinary problem of overtreatment. You see massive amounts of uncoordinated care. The statistics on just the number of seniors who are taking contraindicated drugs is extraordinary. You see an enormous amount of accidental death and death from error. You see literally no governance of the system. All the time I hear from supporters of Medicare For All that Medicare has never been, until recently, in the healthcare
